Jack Pierson

New works made in quarantine in Ridgewood.

It's wonderful that one of Tribeca's best galleries is also one of its oldest and most congenial. Here, Jack Pierson both returns to his assemblage aesthetic of the 1990s and spreads his wings in captivating wall works that have the presence of magic carpets and love letters and a fantastic ease and material intelligence. Then chat with gallerist Schuss himself. —Jerry Saltz

Kerry Schuss Gallery, 73 Leonard Street, through February 13.
